

George Herbert Walker Bush

Starting with accusations that Prescott Bush was a Nazi collaborator before Pearl Harbor, the Bush dynasty has generally been viewed with suspicion and at times outright hostility by Jewish Americans. GHW outraged the Jewish community with a series of perceived insults. Before he became president, GHW once expressed doubt about whether non-Christians could get into heaven, seemed likely to follow in the family tradition.

The charges against Sen. Prescott Bush, the grandfather of W, went beyond the disdain for Jews and discriminatory practices that were characteristic of New England WASP culture in his day. Prescott Bush was a director of a New York bank where rich Germans who supported the Nazis stashed millions in personal wealth.

GHW shared the same exclusionary pedigree as his father, starting with Yale and the secret society Skull & Bones, and had extensive ties to Arabs through the oil industry as well. But most Jews did not consider him unfriendly to their interests so long as he served under Ronald Reagan. Reagan was the first Republican in 80 years to win a sizable share of the Jewish vote. There were a variety of reasons for this, but the key issue was Reagan's hard line on the defense of Israel, which he considered a crucial democratic outpost in the fight against Soviet communism.

GHW and George Shultz, Reagan's Secretary of State, attended Benjamin Netanyahu's Jerusalem Conference on International terrorism, JCIT, held in Jerusalem in 1979. Bush enthusiastically endorsed this concept and gave a speech advocating precisely the type of "war on terror" that his son would implement in 2001.

As Director of the CIA

The CIA under Director GHW Bush came under pressure from congress for a number of abuses. The creation of the Safari Club was necessary because congressional investigations had curbed the activity of the CIA due to its abuse of power. The Safari Club takes its name (reportedly de Marenches' idea) after the exclusive resort in Kenya where the group first met in 1976.

"The Safari Club needed a network of banks to finance its intelligence operations. With the official blessing of George H W Bush as the head of the CIA, Kamal Adham, Director of the Saudi Arabia intelligence agency, transformed a small Pakistani merchant bank, the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), into a worldwide money-laundering machine, buying banks around the world in order to create the biggest clandestine money network in history."

BCCI also served as an intelligence gathering mechanism by virtue of its extensive contacts with underground organizations worldwide. "They contrived, with Bush and other intelligence-service heads, a plan that seemed too good to be true. The bank would solicit the business of every major terrorist, rebel, and underground organization in the world. The invaluable intelligence thus gained would be discreetly distributed to 'friends' of the BCCI.

People might say, "Oh, this is all conspiracy theory," but I would like to remind people that conspiracy is very much recognized by the United States Federal Code and it is called RICO Racketeering and Influence. It is very much recognized because there is so much power in these organizations that they have rules in place. For instance, the DCIA – the Director of CIA – cannot, after his term of DCIA, subsequently run for Vice President or President, which is what happened with George Herbert Walker Bush. That rule was bent for him.

As President GHW took over in 1989 as a self-described pragmatist in international affairs. In the early days after the end of the Cold War, it was no longer fashionable to view the world in binary terms. As a result, many conservative ideological causes—among them Israel—no longer found a champion in the White House.

The point was made most clearly when GHW demanded, in 1991, that the Israelis stop building new settlements in Palestinian-controlled territories. Unlike previous presidents, Bush sounded serious.

He had resisted an unprecedented pro-Israel lobbying campaign that called for $10 billion to help Jews emigrate from their former Soviet Union to Israel complaining in a televised press conference that “one thousand Jewish lobbyists are on Capitol Hill against little old me”. Worse there was his policy of pressuring Israel to the negotiating table at the Madrid conference by freezing their loan guarantees.

(Later, when his re-election was in doubt in 1992, GHW promised to press Congress for the loan guarantees unconditionally.)

Regardless, Israel had had enough of him. An article in the Washington Report on Middle East Affairs, February 1992, entitled “Peril in Being President”, By Paul Findley, reported on an alleged attempt by the Israeli Mossad to assassinate Bush.

According to a former Mossad agent, Viktor Ostrovsky, in 1991, the plan was to leak words to the Spanish police that terrorists were on their way, kill Bush, and in the midst of the confusion release three Palestinians captured earlier and kill them on the spot.

The plan was leaked to the Secret Service and was not implemented. This article also provides additional interesting information on Israeli activities, including its possible role in the death of 241 US Marines in 1983 in Beirut, as well as information on Ostrovsky and his book, and Israel’s attempt to block it.

bin Laden family members invested millions in The Carlyle Group

Several bin Laden family members invested millions in The Carlyle Group, a private global equity firm based in Washington, DC. The company’s senior advisor was Bush’s father, former President George H.W. Bush. After news of the bin Laden-Bush connection became public, the elder Bush stepped down from Carlyle.
